

Remembrance

In the quiet dawn of November's embrace,
We gather as one, with hearts filled with grace.
On Remembrance Day, we stand strong and true,
To honour the brave who valiantly flew.

In fields afar, battles were fought,
For freedom's sake – courage and sacrifice sought.
Their names etched in our hearts will never fade,
Preserved in our memories, within every shade.

Poppy petals fall gently upon the ground,
Symbolizing lives lost for our liberties, forever profound.
We pause in silence, heads bowed low,
Acknowledging the debt we can never fully show.

They stood for justice, for freedom's call,
Ready to conquer and conquer them all.
They fought for peace, a world torn apart,
Unyielding in their devotion, from the very start.

For the fallen we bow, their spirits we embrace,
Forever grateful, in our hearts they find a place.
Their sacrifice echoes through the years,
A reminder to cherish the freedom we hold dear.

For the fallen heroes, we raise our voice,
Pledging to carry their memory, to rejoice.
In each poppy's bloom, their presence we find,
Their courageous spirit forever intertwined.

May their souls find solace, their valour forever remain,
For on this Remembrance Day, their memory shall reign.